NOTE 4.

Samuel Allen occupied the house in Deerfield now used by George Fuller as his studio. There is recorded an itemized account of twenty-two pounds and four shillings rendered by Samuel Allen dated May 20, 1733, for keeping an Indian belonging to the Five Nations who had been long confined with fever sores at Deerfield. (Vol. 1. p. 527.) (See A.)

"The last fatal blow was struck by a party of French Indians, Aug. 25, 1746; and fell upon Samuel Allen while at work with his children in a hayfield hard by the old homestead. He was cut down while bravely confronting the rush of savages, that his children might escape by flight." (See A.) "'In the old burying yard, a slate stone slab 'with uncouth sculpture decked' marks the spot where he was laid to rest. It bears the following quaint epitaph:

'Listen to me, ye mortal men, Beware
That you engage no more in direful
War; By means of War my Soul from Earth is fled. My body's lodged in Mansions of the Dead.'

(A. Vol. 1, p. 527.)

NOTE 5.

Enoch Allen, son of Samuel (3), born Nov. 27, 1744; died in Ashfield, Mass. July 8, 1779; married Nov. 28, 1771 Nancy Belding. In 1795 his widow with seven children, removed to Grand Isle, Vt. (Sheldon's History of Deerfield, Vol. 11, Part 11, p. 14.)

NOTE 6.

"Lieut. Samuel Allen, born in Deerfield, Apr. 30, 1738. was taken captive and carried into Canada in 1747, whence he was redeemed by his uncle, Col. John Hawks, Colonial Agent, favorably known in those days for the defense of Fort Massachusetts and other Military deeds."

"After a captivity of twenty-two months, Samuel unwillingly returned to civilized life. Many things might be told that occurred during such tarry; one or two will suffice: the Indian warriors, calling immediately after their incursions on the valley of the Connecticut river to receive bounty for scalps, presented Samuel's own father's, Mr. Samuel Allen, and sister, Eunice Allen, scaped at same time young Samuel was made prisoner. The Agent's Guard, or party, was advised by the Indians on their return home to pass a river at a particular place, where the treacherous Indians were to be in ambush to massacre and slay all but Samuel. An Indian woman, who had been befriended by Lieut. Samuel's father, warned the Guard."

"On the breaking out of the Revolution, Samuel went into the regular Army as Lieutenant where owing to rivalry, intrigue, his own eccentricity and sternness of character, was not promoted. He resigned after being in many a battle, and acquitting himself well, left the service after two or three years perfectly disgusted, still warmly disposed to the cause of his Country."
